Summary

Join fellow readers of Uncontainable as we stumble along the tragic, comedic, and sometimes terrifying yet heartwarming story of Dr. Zak Ahmed and Darryl Noveschosch.

How did Zak get his diamonds?

How did Darryl meet Halo?

Where's Halo now?

The book will be set in two parts- Past, and Future.

The Past details events before Uncontainable.

The Future details events after.

Come, join the journey.

Item #: 2773

Clearance Level: 3

Object Class: Euclid

Special Containment Procedures: The nature of SCP-2773 is such that no containment measures are feasible nor needed. A perimeter around the exposure zone of SCP-2773, however, will be necessary. SCP-2773 presents an imminent exposure threat to citizens in a surrounding 1.2 kilometer radius. Electrified fence and barbed wire erected as per Foundation standards.

Description: SCP-2773 is an abandoned diamond mine in Cullinan, South Africa. Though it seems perfectly normal (yet eerie, as multiple survey teams noted with noteworthy frequency) on the outside, once the Delta Surveillance Team stepped into the mine there were multiple reports of:

- "Feeling odd" (unease, panic)
- "Fight or Flight"
- Itching sensation on the skin, particularly the elbows and ribs
- Sensation of "walls closing in" (unnatural onset claustrophobia)

Only one researcher proceeded past three-hundred meters into SCP-2773 upon first rounds of inspection. Dr. Zak Ahmed proceeded almost two kilometers into the mines before eventually turning back at around 1800 hours. Exploration started at 0900 hours.

Upon report from Dr. Ahmed, a single diamond-like crystal had protruded from a vein inside the walls of SCP-2773. Dr. Ahmed collected said crystal and placed it inside a Mobile Containment Vessel (MCV) for further inspection.

Further Experiments:

- Dr. Ahmed returned to the 2-km mark, proceeding another kilometer deeper before returning. Result: No response.
- Dr. Ahmed requested to spent 24h inside SCP-2773, supplied with food and water for that period of time. Result: No notable change in SCP-2773, but Dr. Ahmed reported a certain fatigue and remarkable drying of the skin.
- Beta Surveillance Team entered SCP-2773 in Dr. Ahmed's stead. Result: Radio contact was lost approx. 1 hour and 23 minutes into experiment. As of 24h later, they have not returned.

Recommendation: Terminate further experiments and erect security perimeter.
